

Liverpool Law Society are launching the first session in a new foundation series designed for young professionals in their first five years across Professional Business Services. The Foundations series offers an engaging programme focused on developing the core professional skills and soft-skill capabilities needed to succeed early in a career.

The first session takes place on 4 June 2026 at DWF offices in Liverpool from 4.00pm to 6.00pm. The event will explore the value of showing up, connecting face to face, and building meaningful relationships within organisations and across the wider professional community. This session will be chaired by Sarah Mir, DWF Liverpool Managing Partner, and James Mannouch, Immediate Past President of Liverpool Law Society and Supervising Solicitor & Pro Bono Coordinator at The University of Law. The session will also feature a panel of business-services experts sharing practical insights and real-world experience.

Attendees will also have dedicated networking time to meet new people, share experiences, and expand their professional circle in a relaxed environment.
